

SUBSTITUTE ABSTRACT

Please delete the current Abstract and replace it with the following new Abstract:

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a set of resonators integrated in a single-crystal silicon substrate and intended to allow the production of a temperature stable time base. In one implementation, first and second resonators are designed to oscillate in modes of different type and with dimensions such that at least a first thermal coefficient α of their frequency difference is equal or close to zero, and a second thermal coefficient β may also be highly reduced.